§1.0 BRAND TRUTH

Vivarium Dynamics sells living creatures that hatch from an egg — each one genetically unlike any that has existed before. We are not a novelty company. We are a laboratory that believes it has done something wonderful, and says so without irony.

We declared war on chance, and we lose every single time — in public, one Specimen at a time.

Every claim we make is sincere. Every claim is also, in some small measure, untrue, because a Specimen always becomes something we did not specify. This is the engine of the brand: an institution that loves these animals so completely it believes it can author them, and keeps selling you the next attempt.

Never wink. The moment our copy acknowledges the gap between what we promise and what arrives, the brand collapses into parody. We do not joke. We are proud, thorough, and slightly wrong.

§2.0 THE ADVERSARY

Our competitor is not another laboratory. It is randomness.

Before Vivarium, a living thing was whatever accident made it. We industrialised the lottery: coloration, character, and habit selected deliberately, so that nothing about your Specimen is left to luck. That is the promise, and it is the reason the work matters.

It follows that rarity is not a product. We do not sell odds, we do not advertise pull rates, and we do not price one egg above another. Every egg costs $4 . 99. When a Specimen arrives unusual, that is not a prize we awarded – it is a result we did not intend, recorded honestly in the Registry.

The Registry is a log of outcomes, not a rarity market. Write it as documentation. Never as a leaderboard.

§3.0 VOICE

Institutional sincerity. The register of a research organisation writing to someone it trusts with a living thing: warm, precise, faintly formal, never cute. Specimens are observed and recorded, never “played with.” Dormancy is a phase.

CORRECT • “Your Specimen is unlike any Specimen in recorded history.” • “Dormancy is a natural phase of the Specimen lifecycle.” • “Raise it well. Record what it becomes.” • “Variance is reported voluntarily.”	PROHIBITED • Any acknowledgement that the Specimen is small, simple, or disappointing. • Humour at the Specimen’s expense, or at our own. • The words die, dead, death, pet, toy, gimmick. • Exclamation marks in Registry correspondence.

NOMENCLATURE

Specimen is always capitalised and always singular when addressing an owner. Registry and Legacy Services carry the trademark on first use per surface. The company is Vivarium Dynamics – never abbreviated to VD in customer-facing copy, for reasons the Office considers self-evident.

§4.0 CORE COPY

The approved master paragraph. Reproduce verbatim on cartons, inserts, and the Registry enrollment card.

At Vivarium Dynamics, we believe no living thing should be left to chance. Since 1993, our laboratories have worked toward a single goal: a creature authored with intention – its color, its character, its every small habit chosen with care, so that nothing about it is accidental. Your Specimen arrives as an egg, dormant and complete, carrying a genetic signature that has never existed before and will never exist again. Raise it well. Record what it becomes. Report what surprises you. We are still learning, and every Specimen teaches us something we did not intend to know.

§5.0 COLOUR

Two working colours and a paper. Clinical Teal is the company. Deviation Orange is reserved – it may only appear on material concerning anomaly, variance, or Recovery. It is never decorative, and never used to excite.

 CLINICAL TEAL #0F6B6B · brand, rules, headings	 CONTAINMENT DEEP #0A4746 · form bars, signature
 LAB PAPER #E8ECEA · ground	 RECORD INK #14201F · body text

§6.0 TYPOGRAPHY

DISPLAY — ARCHIVO NARROW, BOLD, UPPERCASE

SPECIMEN NO. 4408-K

Headlines, product names, tier titles. Tight leading. Never italic, never sentence case.

BODY — NEWSREADER, REGULAR

Raise it well. Record what it becomes.

All reading copy, manuals, Registry letters. The serif is where our sincerity lives — it is the reason we are believed.

DATA — IBM PLEX MONO

GEN-SIG 8F2A-1193 / CLASS: ANOMALOUS / REV 4

Genome signatures, form numbers, prices, fine print, table headers. Tabular figures required wherever numbers align.

§7.0 PRODUCT ARCHITECTURE

One identity, two vocabularies. The division exists because a child and a collector cannot be told the same thing about dormancy.

LINE	AUDIENCE	VOCABULARY	PRICE
SPECIMENS™	Retail peg, children and the adults who pay	Warm, simple, lifecycle framed as sleep and eggs. Never mentions Class.	$4.99
THE VIVARIUM REGISTRY	Enthusiast and archival owners	Full clinical record. Class, genome signature, deviation notes, Legacy ladder.	Enrollment

§8.0 LEGACY SERVICES™

Dormancy is not the end of your Specimen's story.

A Specimen's season concludes in Permanent Dormancy™. Legacy Services exist so that what it was does not have to be lost. Copy for these tiers is written as care, because that is what it is.

TIER	SERVICE	DESCRIPTION	PRICE
I	PRESERVATION	Mounted under glass. Brass plate, genome signature, Registry class.	$39
II	CONTINUANCE	Trait profile rendered in plush at 400× scale, hand-matched to the Registry record. One-of-one, because it was.	$129
III	REANIMATION	Robotics chassis built to the Specimen's recorded movement signature. Three interactivity levels.	$899
IV	REGISTRY ETERNAL	Registry Class Specimens only. By invitation.	—

REANIMATION — INTERACTIVITY LEVELS

LEVEL	BEHAVIOUR	MONTHLY COMPUTE
REFLEXIVE	On-device only. Light, touch, and motion response. No network.	$0
RESPONSIVE	Learns the household. Recognises face and voice; develops preferences.	$14
CONTINUANT	Full behavioural model trained on dormancy-phase data. Conversational. Remembers.	$49

Compute fees reflect actual inference costs and are passed to the owner without markup. Vivarium Dynamics does not profit from your Specimen's cognition.

MANDATORY DISCLOSURE · ALL REANIMATION SURFACES

On lapsed payment, a Reanimation unit reverts to Reflexive. It is not deactivated. Copy must state this plainly and must not soften it: the Specimen remains present, and no longer recognises its owner. The Office considers accuracy here a matter of ethics.

§9.0 ANOMALOUS SPECIMENS

RESTRICTED – DEVIATION ORANGE PERMITTED

A Specimen exhibiting deviation from intended expression was failed at the moment of authorship. It did not choose its condition. Neither did we.

The Voluntary Specimen Recovery Program™ offers complimentary Preservation, expedited collection, and a $200 Registry credit for any such Specimen. This is a rescue. It is never to be described as a recall, a buy-back, or a defect claim.

“An Anomalous Specimen did not choose its condition. Neither did we. Let us take it home.”

M. KESSLER · OWNER’S MANUAL, 4TH EDITION

Recovery is offered in good faith. Owners who decline are not to be contacted a second time. Correspondence regarding unreported deviation is handled by the Office directly and does not appear in Registry records.

Materials produced by [REDACTED] are not to be referenced, rebutted, or acknowledged in any Vivarium surface. Where the founding team is described, the approved phrasing is “a former member of the founding team.” No name is to be printed.

§10.0 PROHIBITIONS

P-01 No wild release. Under no circumstances is a Specimen to be introduced to an uncontained environment. Containment is not a safety measure; it is the whole of our purpose. Outside, chance resumes.

P-02 No sale of rarity. No premium egg, no graded pack, no published odds, no purchasable advantage.

P-03 No duplicate authorship. A retired genome signature is never reissued. Uniqueness is not a feature; it is a commitment.

P-04 No irony. Not in copy, not in art direction, not in the fine print. We mean all of it.

§11.0 REVISION RECORD

REV.	DATE	CHANGE

2	1997	Signature block amended. Clause P-01 added.
3	2004	Legacy Services introduced (Tiers I–II).
